Miriam Soloveff, child violinist, with the Peninsula Orchestra Concert.

Our Own Orchestra Ready For Its Concert

"Have you your ticket for the Orchestra concert?" It is a small boy speaking, probably the youngest member of the Monterey Peninsula Orchestra, eagerly waiting for you to buy your ticket for the Orchestra concert which is to be played in the Sunset School Auditorium next Tuesday evening, July 25.

Three rehearsals a week now, Sunday, Wednesday and Friday evenings in the Denny-Watrous Gallery, from eight to ten o'clock, Penha berating, coaxing, flaying, praising, driving twenty-six absorbed players into tune and into a harmony that is of the very essence of music, whether it hold the elegant finish of a Philadelphia Orchestra or the freshness and vitality of an amateur group that has the exhilaration and the tempestuous energy of a village baseball game.

The audience has it too—this eager interest—crowding in to rehearsal after rehearsal, breathlessly leaning forward to follow the crescendo in the Corelli, the crystal counterpoint of the Bach d minor with Winifred Howe at the piano, or holding its breath at the hazards of the Ivanow Caucasian Sketches. Most of all does the audience lean forward when eleven-year-old Miriam Soloveff steps up on to her platform under Penha's arm, and raises her bow for the Vieuxtemps.

Then is the fun-full orchestra, everything going strong. Arthur Hately straightens up to come in right for his solo with the harmonium which "Annie Green" pumps desperately to get enough wind for the fortissimo. Roger Lee who carries his tympani over from Pacific Grove, gets out of his chair and stands with poised drum-stick for Penha's baton to hurl its signal at him, Ralph Linsley at the piano thunderously plays everything not yet in the orchestra. Henry Dickinson and Dr. Randol take a long breath and go after the flute."Tutti" passages, Arnold Chapman and Carl Loveland raise their clarinets above the swell and "Get Ready, Celli!" shoots from Penha's lips as his baton points accusingly at the cello section.

And over it all Miriam plays. A little girl, standing there, with serious, intent face, strangely certain and ready, playing with power, mastery, brilliance and a child-genius, as musically mature at eleven years as many a one at twenty-five. "Bravo, bravo." cried Molinari when he heard her. "She is so outstanding—such musical technique — what temperament." And then the celebrated Italian conductor invited the little girl to play with his Roman Symphony.

Kathleen Parlow is Miriam's teacher, and she is present at rehearsals too, watching intently her little pupil.

Tuesday's concert of the Monterey Peninsula Orchestra with Michel Penha as conductor, Winifred Howe, pianist, and Miriam Soloveff, violinist, as soloist, and twenty-six players gathered from Salinas, Pacific Grove, Monterey and Carmel, will be the most exciting musical event of the Carmel Music Society summer season.

After Two Weeks of Battle, Forest Fire Is Controlled

Some 600 fire fighters, their eyes red and bloodshot, their clothes blackened from the smoke and their hands a mass of cuts and bruises, sighed with relief for the first time today as the forest blaze in the Black Cone mountain region, some 50 miles south of here, began to slowly submit to the two week's battle that has been raging in that almost impenetrable country.

The stubborn blaze which broke out mysteriously July 5 has been burning steadily all this time completely out of control. Despite modern fighting equipment, expert knowledge and the efforts of the large crew of men who have been waging the battle against the flames, there has been but little progress in checking the holocaust.

Forest rangers report that it has been more a case of using the men to guard valuable timber by backfiring than in actually preventing the blaze from spreading. Within the last 24 hours, however, the fire has shown definite signs of burning out and it is now said to be under control.

For two weeks the sky has been screened by a thick fog of brush smoke which has covered the entire region for miles around. The smoke is so thick that even an airplane survey conducted by the United States forestry service yesterday failed to show how much area had been burned over by the blaze. It has been estimated at anywhere from 4000 to 6000 acres of brush land.

CIGARETTE STUB CAUSES FIRE IN LOCAL COTTAGE

A cigarette stub left burning on a couch almost resulted in a dangerous blaze at the former Lichtenthaler cottage on Lincoln between Eighth and Ninth last Saturday night.

The fire department responded and before the fire could gain much headway, it was extinguished. The cottage is now owned by Miss E. Gamble and occupied by Dr. Thomas Boone.

WINDOWS RATTLE AS QUAKE SHAKES CITY

A sharp, distinct jolt, which rocked Carmel Sunday afternoon shortly after four, sent many terrified residents out of their cottages.

Windows rattled, open doors slammed, and liquor bottles on shelves toppled over as the result of the quake. No serious damage, however, was reported.

CARMEL DRIVER ESCAPES INJURY IN AUTO CRASH

C. W. McFarlane, well known Carmel resident, narrowly escaped serious injuries last week when he was struck by another machine driven by Hal Fisher, stationed at the R. O. T. C., camp at the Monterey presidio.

The accident occurred when the two machines collided with terrific force on the Carmel hill. McFarlane was not injured and Fisher sustained minor cuts and bruises.

Bitter Fight Looms on Zoning of Carmel-San Simeon Highway

Vigorous opposition to the proposed zoning of the Carmel-San Simeon highway loomed definitely today as property owners in that section of the coast obtained legal aid to place their case before the Monterey County planning commission at a public hearing to be held in Salinas on July 31.

And at the same time, Carmel which has always waged an active fight to protect scenic beauty, was preparing in a similar fashion to block the opposition of the property owners. Indications point to another battle as bitter as the one staged some months back when Carmel successfully won a victory to zone the highway near the town.

The property owners, it is understood, are not opposed to zoning, but they are against the plan which has been approved by the commission. They feel that the plan is not only unjust but is damaging to their own interest.

According to DeWitt George Smith, leader of the opposition forces, his group are seeking modification of the proposed zoning ordinance. The property owners in that section, he said, are ready to form an association and draft their own regulations which will be submitted to the planning commission as a counter proposal.

Carmel Martin, president of the commission, today indicated that he favored the plan for a Property Owners' Protective association.

"The big value to the property owner lies in the beauty along the road," Martin said. "He must cash in on that basis. The planning commission is trying to find some way to preserve that beauty and get a return for the public on its money invested in the road. The problem is to do so without working too great a hardship on the owner."

Rodeo Filled With Thrilling Events Opens for 3-day Run

Salinas, dressed in its annual holiday garb, awaited this afternoon for the opening of the famous California rodeo.

This morning, a prominent group of judges which included Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, Peter B. Kyne and Congressman J. A. McGrath interviewed some 30 feminine candidates for the title of "Sweetheart of the Rodeo."

At noon the daily parade will wind its way through the principal streets of Salinas to the rodeo grounds. At 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, Governor James Rolph will fire into the warm Salinas atmosphere of a .32 caliber pistol which will officially open this year's wild west show.

From then on until Sunday afternoon, it will be a week-end of gaiety and merriment. The affair comes to a climax tomorrow night with El Colmo del Rodeo parade which will include dozens of illuminated floats, four bands of marching men and women.

Because of the fact that this year the rodeo was reduced from five to three days, the program will be more varied and overloaded with thrilling events. The rodeo will again be held tomorrow afternoon and Sunday evening.

Tickets for the rodeo can be purchased in Carmel through Staniford's drug store.

STORK DROPS BOY AT CHARLES E. MAY HOME

A new heir to the Mission Cleaners was smiling today. And so was the proud father.

A baby boy was born last week-end to Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. May, well known Carmel residents. The boy was a happy surprise for they already have three daughters.

Tuesday afternoon the Bridge Club met at the Monterey Peninsula Contry Club for an afternoon of bridge. The members present were: Mesdames C. D. Rand, Franklin Thompson, John Abernethy, William Lee, Violet Lynstrom, Clarence Terry and Grace Seale.

Famous Actors Play In Shakespeare's "Merchant"

George Marion, internationally famous actor, will make his first Carmel appearance in the Merchant of Venice, presented by the Forest Theater, July 28 and 29. Gloria Stuart, Hollywood Screen star is expected to play Portia.

Mr. Marion will portray Shylock, with an excellent supporting cast of 20 people, directed by Herbert Heron and including Rosslyn J. Cowen, Lloyd Weer, Eugene Watson, favorites of the Ivory door; Peggy Hoffman, Philip Walker, W. J. Crabbe and Ralph House and Lloyd Test.

Continuing his admirable work in stage sets, Clay Otto is now designing for the Forest theater's latest production material which is expected to be even more effective than that of the Pirates of Penzance and the Ivory Door.

There is a strong enthusiasm among the actors, who are enjoying the association with Mr. Marion.

Mr. Heron anticipates a large audience as Shakespeare is always popular and the exquisite setting of the Forest theater and the full beauty and depth of the stage are particularly suitable for the scenes in Belmont.

This play will be the last of the summer series, after which the season's program will be repeated.

As there is yet room for a number of people in the carnival scene, those who are interested in securing parts may report at rehearsal on Monday evening at 7:30.

Rehearsals Underway with Fine Cast for Martin Flavin's Play

With one of the finest casts gathered together in Carmel in years, rehearsals have been under way for more than a week for the western premiere of Martin Flavin's famous play, "Amaco," to be produced at the Carmel Community Playhouse early next month.

The play, called by critics who have read it in the script as the greatest thing Flavin has ever written, has been produced only once and then as an experimental production in an eastern university.

This will be the first time it will be staged for the general public with a semi-professional cast playing the eighteen odd roles in the production. William Gaskin, famous New York artist spending the summer in Carmel, has designed the seven sets necessary for the production.

The lead for the play is in the hands of Nestor Paiva, well-known professional actor who is making his debut in the cast. Others who will play important roles will be such nationally known figures as Lincoln Steffens, James Hopper, Frederick Bechdolt, Robert Welles Ritchie, Edward Weston and many others.

Edward G. Kuster who staged the tremendously successful play, "Beggar on Horseback," last year is directing "Amaco."

"I think 'Amaco' will leave the same impression if not deeper in Carmel theatrical history than "The Beggar on Horseback," Kuster said. "We are trying to make this show an outstanding success —something that Carmel can be proud of."

Lighthouse Keeper Retires After 30 Years of Service

For thirty years, A. J. Silva has lived virtually the life of a hermit in the lone Port San Luis light station and in the Piont Sur lighthouse on the Carmel coastline

This week, Silva was honorably retired from service and together with his family plan to make their home in a secluded spot in San Jose, away from the roar of the ocean which has been so much a part of his life.

Silva first entered lighthouse service at Point Sur, some thirty years ago. After being connected at that station for many years, he was transferred to Port San Luis lighthouse in San Luis Obispo county.

There he guarded the huge lights and fog horns which warned mariners of the dangerous rocks in their course as they sailed the San Luis Obispo coast line on dark and stormy nights.

"It has been a wonderful experience these 30 years of service," Silva said on retiring. "Yes, many nights were lonesome first, but one finally becomes accustomed to it. I still love the sea and although I want to be away from it for a while,, I'll make frequent trips to Carmel and Big Sur. There is a certain fascination about the sea that seems to grip you once you get used to it."

When Silva went first to the Point Sur lighthouse, he was in his late twenties with a fresh complexion and dark brown hair. Today on his retirement, he is in his sixties. His hair has turned a silvery white and his face is a mass of lines.

WATCH YOUR LIGHTS OR YOU'LL BE CAUGHT

E. Raymond Cato, chief of the California Highway Patrol, has announced that he is planning a series of "surprise raids" to be held at widely separated points throughout the state against violators of headlight provisions.

Secret orders will be issued to the Captains of squads operating in districts where raids are to be conducted giving them the dates upon which the work will be done. Officers will be required to conduct the "surprise raids" in addition to their regular patrol duties.

The raids will be aimed particularly at drivers operating with glaring lights and cars equipped with only one head lamp or without a tail light.

All county squads will take part although the raids will be so arranged that squads in adjacent or nearby counties will not be operating on the same evenings. This will eliminate the possibility that motorists traveling across several counties during an evening will be stopped more than once.

Cato said it would take several weeks to complete the work. Meanwhile he urged drivers knowing or suspecting their lights to be faulty and out of adjustment to waste no time in having them put in proper condition.

Citation cards will be issued to all offenders ordering them to appear in court in addition to the requirement that their lights be corrected and a report made to the proper authorities thereafter.

"Heathers at Home" Should Have Remained at Own Home

By Herbert Cerwin

It would have been much better if "The Heathers at Home" had remained in their own metropolitan area and left Carmel alone. The presentation of this production over the week-end by the Cornish Players was about as slow and amateurish as anything done here in the past.

It was the type of a show fit for a high school stage, rather than for artistic, sophisticated Carmel. Yet, oddly enough, the audience on Sunday night applauded enthusiastically as this prosaic, domestic drama unfolded itself over a tedious period of two and a half hours.

This applause may explain many things. After all, Carmel may not want original, imaginative, sophisticated theatrical entertainment. Can it be that "The Heathers at Home" is the type of production that is ideally suited for the vilage? It has created a certain suspicion in our minds that is not easy to wipe out.

The acting itself in "The Heathers at Home" was not as bad as the beginning paragraphs of this review might indicate. As a matter of fact, we believe that the fault of the entire production consisted principally in the tempo of the direction and in the manner the play was joined together.

The play itself had some fine possibilities as a comedy. Particularly the third act with its "new type of breathing" should have brought down the house with laughter if done properly. As to direction, the play moved so slow at times one could have gone out for a cigarette and returned ten minutes later without having missed any important part of it.

If there was any real acting done in the production it was carried out by Martha Nash as Mrs. Heather and Vernon Worthingham as Mr. Heather himself. Miss Nash not only did some fine work of acting but fitted well into the role. With some better direction, Worthingham might have done an outstanding piece of acting. As to the other players, it is much better to forget about them.

One feels somewhat reluctant about being severe on an out-of-town company. Yet after all, the Cornish Players are posing as a professional company and selling seats on that basis. They should return to the Cornish workshop in Seattle and remain there until such a time when they will not hurt the little theatre movement by going on the road.

No one should blame Edward G. Kuster for bringing the Cornish Players to Carmel. In the little theatre movement they have a fine reputation and possibly under ordinary circumstances would have given a better show.

It's a good thing to bring outside performers to Carmel not only for the sake of variety in talent but to show the village what other theatrical groups are doing. After seeing a performance like "The Heathers at Home" one realizes how much better, how more of a professional production is staged by the Carmel amateurs.

HALLDIS STABELL TALKS ON BODY SCULPTURE

The annual talk of Halldis Stabell on bodily posture, and the science of bodily control which will be given tomorrow evening in the Denny-Watrous Gallery, is an event that draws its audience from all walks of life.

When Halldis Stabell was lecturing in Europe, there were usually pupils of Auer, dancers, musicians, sculptors, painters and doctors making up a large percentage of her crowded audiences. In Carmel it is getting to be the same. Musicians and dancers are especially interested in Miss Stabell's approach to correct posture and its relation to their work..

Halldis Stabell has spoken before all the medical associations of the State, before the University of California and the Southern Universities, twice for Mills College, for mogt of the larger Clubs of the State, for Lane Hospital, and the St. Francis Hospital, to mention but a few of the groups that have shown an active interest in Miss Stabell's work in body sculpture.

Halldis Stabell is a Norwegian by birth and a graduate Director of gymnastics from Teilmann's Institute in Copenhagen, where she studied gymnastics, massage, orthopedy, anatomy, physiology and pathology under the instruction of noted physicians. She has taught physical education in Paris, Berlin, Copenhagen and Budapest and established her own Institute in Oslo and Stockholm.

Miss Stabell has established herself in Carmel and conducts a summer school. Her talk tomorrow evening in the Denny-Watrous Gallery is open to the public without charge.

"Ivory Door" Leads to Applause When Staged at Forest Theater

By Herbert Corwin

When A. A. Milne wrote "The Ivory Door" he not only fashioned an imaginative tale with all the delicate trimmings of a romantic fairy story, but he went a step further; he built a psychological situation that almost made it into a serious drama.

Shakespeare used his fools for his wise, ironic utterances. Milne employed a fairy tale to plunge into the intermost depths of human emotions. All men seek escape from themselves . . . some with wine, some with writing, some with gas. "The Ivory Door," led the way to freedom; yet all, except a chosen few, were blind to it.

At least that was our interpretation of it as we sat Saturday night in the Forest Theater and watched under a low hanging fog, the colorfulu opening of the play. It was directed and it was played as something of a fantasy; that must have been Milne's intention. Expert raconteur that he is, he delivers his bitter, philosophical pills with coated saccharine.

"The Ivory Door" was admirably chosen for production at the Forest Theater. It fitted in with the open air atmosphere and some of the scenes were outstanding from the standpoint of beauty. the close-up away from the stage of King Perivale and The Mummer in the woods was one of the bright spots of the production.

In the prologue, Irving Short as Prince Perivale did some unusual fine acting for a youngster. Not frequently can a youth his age be found who goes through long lines without the slightest hesitation. Adult players in the show who forgot their lines should bow to youth.

Hal Garrott made an impressive King Hilary. We believe, however, that the best piece of acting in the show went to Ross Cowen. In the small scene that he had, he almost stole all the applause.

James Kemble Mills who did such fine work in "The Beggar on Horseback" lived up to expectations in the role of King Perivale. It was a difficult part and Mills handled it with the subtlety and polish so essential for the part.

As always, Albert Van Houtte gave an impressive portrayal of the ancient vilager who knows his legends. Eugene Watson as the Chancellor; John David Tyrrell as Brand; Marion Todd as Anna; Louise Cowen as Thora and Eugenie Douglas as Princess Lilia all aided in making the production successful.

The part of Bruno, the captain of the guard, should have been one of the most important of the production. Frank Hefling was not rightly cast for the part, yet he did the best under circumstances which he could not help. We would like to see him again in another role.

Others in the cast included, Yvonne Castle, Robert Edgren Jr., Philip Walker, Makham Johnston, W. B. Williams, Joe Schoeninger, Ray Hamilton, Tom Crosthwaite, Lloyd Weer, Majorie Conover, Marie Delmas, Theresa Durante, Sall Fry, Travis Bogard, Robert D. Conover, James Douglas, Ralph James, Ross Kiester, Harvey Short and Reeve Conover.

Dorothy Foulger did a splendid piece of directing under the time limit in which she worked. The enterprising board of governors of the Forest Theater should learn the lesson that you cannot give three productions in one month with but a few week's rehearsal.

It isn't even done with professionals. But then of course, amateurs tread where no one else will.

DAY NURSERY OPENS

PEBBLE BEACH STABLES A POPULAR PLACE TO RIDE

There are many, many reasons why the Pebble Beach stables are proving so popular to those who make horseback riding their recreation. Situated in the heart of the Seventeen mile drive, Pebble Beach stables afford the rider innumerable trails over which to enjoy the scenery either at canter or a walk. It is never necessary to ride over the same trails twice although any one of the many can be taken over and over and still never become tiresome.

It is never a problem at the Pebble Beach stables to find the right horse. There are horses to suit any rider, from the gentle, well-broken trail horse to a spirited jumper. There are large horses and small ones, all carefully groomed and well kept. They can stand the hardest riding and can always be relied upon to bring one back to the stables well satisfied. Unlike many livery horses, the horses at the Pebble Beach stables are not cold-mouthed and lazy. It is a real pleasure to ride them.

Comfort is the keynote at the stables. If you haven't a riding habit just wear old clothes of any sort. Also the stables will supply jeans or chaps if desired.

If you wish to order the horses ahead of time although it is not necessary just phone 248-W.—adv

The Devil Walks

By Herbert Cerwin

We never thought it would be possible for a review of local dramatic offering to be the center of so much controversy, unfavorable and otherwise.

Within a few hours after our review last week of "The Imaginary Invalid" appeared, the telephone started to ring. Total strangers called up and inquired if we had lost our minds in praising the show; still others came knocking at our door, nforming us that for at least once, we were justified in applauding a production.

From Salinas came a letter suggesting that we should restrict our reviewing of theatrical productions to the high school stage; from San Francisco, came a special delivery message urging us to our doubts aside—"The Imaginary Invalid was a great show . . ."

Some of the wildest and most amusing stories have been told on the street curbs regarding "The Imaginary Invalid" production.

One story has it that one of the principal characters in the show was so drunk he went through his lines admirably. Another story accuses us of having been bribed with a case of Scotch in order to produce a favorable review. Of course, Scotch would have helped, but unfortunately it was only a rumor.

Wrong? It's more likely that we were more wrong than right in our judgment. After all, who ever heard of a dramatic review being anything but inaccurate.

Whether we were wrong in our judgment of "The Imaginary Invalid" is not of much interest. The fact, however, that so many readers of The Pine Cone are so divided over the staging of a single production is noteworthy.

Reviews are not often read, except by members of the cast themselves. "The Imaginary Invalid," we believe, has been the cause of more parleying than any other show staged here in some time. When theatregoers take that much interest in a production, it is a healthy indication that they are keeping a close tab on dramatic offerings in Carmel.

Another show that may also become the center of a controversy is the Pacific coast premiere of Martin Flavin's play, "Amaco" which will be given here under the direction of Edward Kuster in August.

This show, if present indications mean anything, should be the biggest staged here in years. It will be a play that may draw audiences from all parts of the state. Kuster has arranged for an outstanding cast.

IS THAT SO?

By Winsor Josseyn

Beersickle—the new confection.

And why not? All too long have children been the only ones eating candy as they romped along the sidewalk. Their frozen, flavored water on a stick will find its counterpart for the grown-ups in a pint of beer frozen on a stick.

Lap up your beer as you walk along the Avenue.

Speaking of beer, a sad account comes to mind wherein a case of beer was sacrificed to early autoing in Montana.

This was years ago when cars had their troubles, not like nowadays when machines are perfectly foolproof. The car in question boiled away its water when the crest of a hill was just in sight; the region was strange to the motorists, and water might be leagues away. The only liquid at hand was a case of beer.

Into the radiator went the beer, bottle by bottle, poured by the thirsty owner. The car got under way. Just over the top of the hill was—yes, a watering trough.

Styles change, and with them, changes the knowledge of outmoded materials.

"What," came question to the younger snappy numbers, "is bombazine?"

"Bombazine?" came reply. "Huh—that's something you clean gloves with."

Tal Josselyn maintains summer weather conditions in Carsummer weather cinditions in Carmel can be predicted absolutely by plotting the outdoor plays to be given. It is a known fact that the worst fogs have been had when the costumes on the actors have been thinest—such as "Midsummer Night's Dream" and its scant draperies, its wrapped burlap.

An Eskimo play, on the other hand, would bring balmy skies, so perhaps a series of plays, carefully graded, could be scheduled to give ideal outdoor acting weather.

Want a good book? Get James Hopper's "Medals of Honor," published in 1929 by John Day. Jimmie takes eleven Congressional Medals of Honor men of the late war (in which he was correspondent for Collier's) and tells fierce stories in that, easy, graphic way of his, keeping his heroes in highlight against the black background of world conflict.

Here's another 1915 movie thriller as headlined beneath an advertising picture of a frock-coated snake offering his stenographer champagne—right on the office desk.

"THE SEVENTH COMMANDMENT—A THREE ACT STORY OF TODAY!

"This is Kalem's three-reel epic of terrible retribution. It shows the cur who flees a husband's wrath; his partner in guilt; the girl sought by the vengeful husband to be used as an instrument of justice and the young reporter who saves her in the nick of time—characters torn from the book of life!"

You never know what will turn up in Carmel next. Today it is a Latin translation, dug out of the archives by a group of linguists summering here. It all goes to show how there is nothing new in the world.

BLOWOUTS are caused by frictional heat generated in the fibers of the cotton cords in a tire. Firestone is the only tire built with heavy cotton fiber saturated and coated with pure rubber—to prevent destructive heat. This is one of the reasons why Firestone Tires have been on the winning cars in the 500 mile Indianapolis Race for 14 consecutive years—the world's most severe blowout test.

Rubber has gone up 242%, cotton 115%—substantial tire price increases must follow. We will give you an attractive allowance for your old tires on new Firestone High Speed Tires.

Allowing for slight variations in meaning, the professors agree on the following interpretation:

The title is PIONEERS, and following that . . . .

Two veteran tusks are dark with age,
But hardy and firm are they,
Like monoliths of the druids of old—
Of days long passed away.
Heroes, they, of many a strife,
With tripe and beefsteaks tough—
With butternuts and hickory nuts,
They found the going rough.
And, as their puny comrades fell
Gave way to pseudo mates,
These faithful snags were mooring posts
And held the gaudy plates.
All honor to these ancient ones,
So sturdy, grizzled and brown—
These noble, unsung heroes
Should wear a laurel crown.

The good old weather-worry is with us again. Just as soon as the rains of Spring have run into the sea, we get the fogs of Summer and the wailing of many voices.

Well, we'll simply have to dust off the time-worn antidote for the extreme cases. When somebody gets you by the lapel or by the arm and says, "Ain't it terrible? Fog, fog, fog! It'll just ruin the tourist trade, and it makes me so depressed I simply can't sleep nights," you do this—tell 'em:

"I know it, it's the worst I've ever seen. Now, I'm too busy to take care of it, but I want you to be a Committee of One and look into the matter. Don't leave a page unturned. I'll expect you to cure this fog menace once and for all, and meantime we'll keep it to ourselves and not say another word about it."

China to Spend Millions for American Planes Official Says

More than fifty-five million dollars will be spent within the next five years in this country in the purchase of American made airplanes by China, Major Edward Howard of the United States department of comerce predicted today following his return from a two and a half year survey in the Orient.

Major Howard, who as a representative of the United States government was authorized to aid in the promotion of trade between the far east and America, brought back with him figures showing that this country was now supplying virtually every plane bought by the Chinese.

"There are more American manufactured planes purchased by China the first four months of 1933 than any other previous year," Major Howard revealed. "Almost daily the interest in aviation is increasing in China and if this demand continues one can confidently predict that within five years some fifty-five million can manufacturers for airplanes."

Major Howard pointed out that the demand for air travel in China may become greater than in any other foreign country. He explained that China, a nation twice the size in area of the United States had but 8000 miles of railroad.

"The Chinese are more interested in reaching a destination than in high speed travel," Major Howard said. "They are quickly finding out that with the use of airplanes they can reach territory within a few days time that would ordinarily take five months to cover under any other method of transportation. The competition for foreign planes is tremendous and other nations are under bidding us and giving long loan extensions in the hope of selling their airships to China. Fortunately, however, America has so far and I think will continue to have a supremacy in the sale of its airplanes to other powers."

Major Howard stopped in Carmel this week to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Howard. He is now enroute to Washington where he will report his promotional work to the United States department of commerce.

While he visited other countries including Japan, Australia and New Zealand, Major Howard centered his efforts on China where he lived for two and a half years. During that period he became closely acquainted with the representative heads of the various Chinese governments and was instrumental in greatly stimulating trade for American made aviation products.

"Of all the foreign countries," Major Howard said, "China is in the best position to buy American products. Hardly any planes are manufactured there and most of them are being exported from this country. The war lords are realising that the government that will eventually control China will be the one that is supreme in the air."

As a result of this, Major Howard stressed, a well organized aviation school has been established at Hongchow, where from 50 to 60 students are graduated every six months and placed in military service.

Contrary to popular opinion, Major Howard disclosed, there is virtually no need for American pilots or Chinese pilots who are trained in this country.

"American pilots who are going to China with a view to finding employment would be better off if they stayed at home," Major Howard added. "China prefers to train its own aviators for military service. There is no commercial aviation in China and flying by civilians is prohibited by law."

Major Howard also predicted that within a short time, regular passenger and air mail service between China and the United States may be established. He said the planes would hop first from Oakland to Hawaii and from there to Manila. There would be several more stops and then China would be reached.

Mrs. Ester Englesby spent the week in San Francisco.

Save The Highway

Shall we leave the construction of a code of zoning along the Carmel-San Simeon highway to the property owners thereon? Are the property owners the proper guardians of the beauty around them, at any time? Are these people down the coast qualified peculiarly to determine what constitutes the safeguards to a highway's beauty?

Under the best conditions in the world the making of zoning laws may not be left to the people affected.

Their selfish interests are opposed to the entire principle. Each owner is willing to zone his neighbor, but not himself. The result is chaos.

Carmel is directly interested in keeping the great highway to the south, leading to this village, a thing of scenic beauty. In a way, Carmel represents the whole state of California in this matter. Millions of people who will, in future, travel this route, are looking to us now to prevent its ruination by auto camps, service stations, and billboards.

With the knowledge that we are the representatives of the beauty lovers of California we should attnd the hearing before the county supervisors on Monday, July 31, and place before them a fair and reasonable plan for zoning.

Again Those Carmel Dollars

The other day, in the cigar-box that serves the Pine Cone for a till, were 146 Carmel Dollars. This represented what had accumulated after using every effort to push them out into circulation, with every bill paid, and all our employees taking their limit of the scrip. It was a situation requiring deep thought. A little concern like the Pine Cone may not tie up so much of its working capital in works of art, no matter how pretty.

Our first idea was to stamp up the redeemed portion of the oldest of the issue—those already fairly well filled with three-cent stamps—and send them to the bank for redemption. If an appreciable number could be canceled at a cost of ten or twelve per cent, we could better afford to pay it than have the money idle. Figuring it over, we found that it would cost us more than 25 per cent to redeem even a score of the oldest. Obviously, that was out of the question.

Then we had a real bright idea. We'd pay bills in advance with Carmel Dollars. Anyone ought to be happy to get money that was still to be earned, no matter what it was paid in. Next month, we would be owing the butcher, the baker and the candlestick-maker, and each of them would be offered his money right now, cash in advance, if he'd accept the scrip.

Carmel Dollars are accepted in payment for purchases everywhere in Carmel; we have seen the signatures of the merchants to such a statement; but try to get rid of a hundred or more! Try to pay for stuff you won't need for a month with Carmel Dollars. See the look of disgust in the eyes of the merchant as you shake a roll of scrip under his nose and state your proposition. "I'll be owing you twenty or thirty dollars in thirty days. Let me pay you now—with these."

"As a favor and not because we want to, we'll take five," was the frequent answer. More often the merchant said he was already stuck with all he could dispose of. One or two grinned, accepted, and stowed them away to give back to us on the first of August in payment for advertising.

All of which means that the Carmel Dollar is a flop. Few, if any, have earned their 35 stamps and been redeemed. The rest of them circulate back and forth among a limited number of good natured merchants, who pay dearly for their good nature. There are 1000 of them out, and they will have cost these merchants $1050 before they are redeemed. They move slugishly, because nobody loves them. Instead of aiding business, they are a detriment to business. If the same merchants who are now paying the costs of stamps and having the trouble of stamping and cancelling, then trying to pass them on, had put up $1000 in the first place for unemployment relief, the result would have been time and trouble saved.

The Pine Cone wants the Carmel Dollar withdrawn from circulation and rather than have the continual and increasing bother of pressing them upon unwilling recipients, will stamp and redeem all Carmel Dollars received in the regular course of business, that have thirty or more stamps upon their backs. We have done our best to get the general public interested in the scheme, and we still belicve that a little support by the residents of Carmel would have pushed it across; but it has proven to be a limited liability. A few business houses of Carmel have paid the bill. The general public has sat back and watched these few merch-engravings, and smiled to think how kind they ants sticking yellow stamps on the backs of green are to the needy unemployed of Carmel.

No Man Knoweth

The way of the Spirit no man knoweth;
Working his will unseen, unheard.
Up from the dark the wild rose bloweth;
In silence is wrought the song of a bird.

Poet and prophet and sage have sought him.
Conquered by darkness, blinded by sun,
Ever the seeker's way hath brought him
Back where his futile path begun.

Let me only be still, and wonder,
Bow my knees, press my face to the sod;
In silence unbroken, hear him thunder,
In darkness unlightened, see the Lord God!

—CHARLES BALLARD

Appreciation

I'm glad for all the lovely things of life . . .
For apple orchards blooming in the spring;
Blue irises against a sunlit wall
Long flights of honking wild geese on the wing;
For pungent bonfires smoldering in the fall,
And water tumbling over polished rocks;
For lazy black and orange buterflies,
For tidy sailing-boats and crimson phlox;
Dark silhouetted trees on blood-red skies
And yellow lights that quiver in the rain;
For silent seagulls dipping in the spray;
The restful calm that follows after pain
And silent darkness at the close of day.

—HELEN MILLER LEHMAN
In Berkeley Courier

For a Gypsy In Prison

Never again the wind from the high Sierras;
Never again the far dim trail
And the smell of tar-weed and wet pine needles,
Nor call of the mountain quail.

Never again the laughing mountain waters
Singing their lonely way to the sea;
Never again the madrone creamy with blossoms
Nor blue young growth of eucalyptus tree.

Now within four close walls you hunger vainly
For life, till your starry soul grows sick;
Turning this way and that and forever meeting
Four close walls, a roof—and a lock click.

Four close walls and a roof . . . dear God in Heaven!
Four close walls, a roof and a lock click
Over, and over, and over, while life goes ticking
Slow to a death that cannot be too quick.

Never again the wind from the high Sierras;
Never again will you lie
And hear wood-pigeons calling each to the other;
Never again will you idly lie

Real Advertising

Because of limited wall-space, and perhaps a critical jury, the show of canvasses at the annual summer exhibit of the Carmel Art Association, now on at the Denny-Watrous Gallery is small and select. It merits a visit from everyone in Carmel, and as there is no admission charge, it will probably have one. There is one painting there that is worth going miles to see, and if I were a Chamber of Commerce or a Business Man's Association, I would prefer to have that picture shown than to issue 100,000 pamphlets about the attractions of Carmel.

The painting is of the James house at the Highlands, and is the work of E. Charlton Fortune. Without derogation of any of the other canvasses hanging there, many of which are marvelous, all of which are fine, I am certain that this colorful masterpiece is better advertising for Carmel than full pages in the Saturday Evening Post. It has been shown, I was told, in exhibits in four other cities in California, and unless it is sold directly, it will probably go on the walls of other shows, west and east. "I want to live where that was painted," is certain to be the thought of everyone who looks upon it.

On the walls of the gallery are other pictures that make Carmel seem attractive; paintings of Point Lobos, of the old Missions, of sea and mountains hereabouts; some of which, probably, cause the same feeling of deep interest in locality to other minds as the Charlton painting does to mine. This is the best kind of advertising that Carmel could possibly have. And there is a way to advance its effectiveness open to you and to me.

A drive is on this week to secure associate members of the Carmel Art Association. An annual fee of two dollars will make anyone a member, and nobody has to know a palette from a corkscrew to become an associate. The funds raised in this way are used to give free exhibitions of paintings, or to send exhibits to other cities for a showing.

There should be at least 500 associate members of the organization in Carmel. Every business man or woman should send in his two dollars as a civic duty. Every resident of the village should go to the show—open daily, and free—and leave two dollars with the women in charge for a membership. For it is better to foster and encourage the Carmel Art Association—and I'm speaking now from an advertising viewpoint—than to shout Carmel's praises from the housetops.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

I wonder if you remember as I do the beautiful pen drawings in Century and Harpers of landscapes both here and abroad that for nearly forty years brightened the pages of those magazines. I can still see the artist's signature in the corner, "Harry Fenn," finely lettered, always the same, and the sign of good art and true illustration.

Harry Fenn had his home in New York, though he lived abroad much of the time, in England and on the continent. His daughter, Lillian Fenn, also an artist, is now in Carmel, the guest of Roberta Balfour at the Thudicum cottage, Lincoln and Seventh streets. She now makes her home at La Jolla, and is a member of an art club there, carrying off four prizes in the annual show of painting, woodcarving, metal work and embroidery last fall.

Some pastels of views about Carmel done by Miss Fenn are in Der Ling shop in Dolores street.

Ted Eshbaugh, recently a visitor here with his mother, Mrs. Zada Eshbaugh and his brother Jack, guests of Roberta Thudicum, was the pioneer in multicolor animated cartoons. His latest work, shortly to be released, is "The Wizard of Oz." The preview at Los Angeles was enthusiastically received a few weeks ago, the music and scenery of backgrounds exceeding anything now on the screen for beauty and color, it was said.

Eshbaugh has perfected a yellow, which added to the three color filters which make up his films, gives a peculiar richness depth to his delightful fantasies. His "Goofy Goat" was very popular, and the "Wizard" is being anxiously awaited by all lovers of the Frank Baum tales which are now for the first time being screened.

With J. Frank Baum, son and heir to the more than a dozen books of the late Frank Baum, Eshbaugh has the exclusive right to the stories for movie production. His brother Jack is manager of the producing organization at Hollywood, and Carl Stallings is musical director. Another brother, Billy, has been heard frequently over the radio, and is now taking part in the successful show, "Music in the Air," now playing in Hollywood, coming to San Francisco in August.

While in Carmel, Ted Eshbaugh paid many visits to Point Lobos, and found inspiration there for an indigenous play on which he has been working during his vacation.

Nellie Murphy Montague has memories, and isn't afraid to tell them and admit the years that she could well deny, for they have treated her kindly. She says, "I remember the first play at the Forest Theater, with Dr. Beck moaning, 'Alas, my lambs!' I remember the first pageant, with Grant and Margaret Wallace like a knight and his lady out of a fairy book, and Moira a wee toddler. I remember a dinner at the Perry Newberry's first house on Carmelo street, when the walls of the dining room were bounded by an unfinished fireplace on one side and infinity on the other three sides; roofed with pine leaves and stars.

"I remember Grace Mac Gowan Cooke, little Helen and baby Katherine stoned by irate Hopi Indians long before they ever came to Carmel. I was an old timer here when Harry Leon Wilson first saw the village. I remember the Jeffers' honeymoon walks along the line of the surf at dusk on the beach. And I knew Winsor Josselyn when he was just a little boy."

Now Nellie Murphy Montague once a month tells the people who come to Tilly Polak's gallery to listen a great deal of interesting information of the textiles of native western America. Her next talk is given Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Montague spent her childhood in the Navajo country, where her father, the celebrated Martin Murphy, was Indian agent and an authority on the native people of the southwest. His collection, made over years of patient assembling of rare textiles and the weaving of many looms, has been of great assistance to the archeologists, who have had opportunity to study it while at the Smithsonian Institute at Washington.

Mrs. Montague knows well the interesting subject on which she talks and has an exhibit of the rarest weaves of the Navajos and the Mexican natives, blankets that are marvelous in texture and color.

S. Parker Frisselle, manager of the Kearney Park vineyard at Fresno, and chairman of the agricultural committee of the State Chamber of Commerce, was in Carmel this week a guest of Mrs. Gilbert Hindermyer and her daughter, of Philadelphia. The annual meeting of the directors of the statewide organization was held at Hotel Del Monte last Thursday.

"Of particular interest to our board," said Mr. Frisselle, "is the matter of Federal relief to agriculture in the emergency credit offered under the new law. California crops call for an entirely different program from that which will apply to staple crops nationally produced. Wheat, corn, cotton and cattle are on a quite different basis to grapes, prunes, raisins, apricots, lettuce and artichokes.

"These differences have to be adjusted, and we are working to operate with the Government in every way, to uphold the hands of the Administration in Washington during this important time."

Out in the middle west, a state patrolman stopped a World-Fair-bound motorist from Carmel. He said.

"Would you mind sir, filling out a questionaire?" He passed the blank to the driver of the car, who willingly obliged. "Your'e the seven-hundred and eighty-first California license that has passed here today heading for Chicago's Century of Progress," the officer went on. "And according to the answers to my questionaire, 781 of them intend to return to California."

Says Howard Talbot, art critic of the San Francisco Wasp-Newsletter:

A good many artists have been preoccupied with such lowly subjects as sheep in meadows and cows in barnyards. California painters in particular have found inspiration in barns; and no collection of California landscapes is considered complete without its old red barn under a clump of eucalyptus. Paul Whitman, exhibiting now at Courvoiser's has yielded to the fascination of barns particularly barn interiors a surrender which has opened up to him an opportunity to make use of a rich but restrained gamut of gamboges, umbers and siennas, a favored color scale with him; and to create a pleasant effect with hay and chickens and brown rafters. Stepping outside the barn into the barnyard, Mr. Whitman has painted some very good pigs. His battered old deserted houses are likewise effective.

The demand for foreign made moving pictures is now greater than any other period in the history of the film industry, according to Max Binheim, of the International Theatre company who was the guest over the week-end at the home of Edward G. Kuster on the Point.

Binheim said that this increased demand for foreign pictures could be traced directly to the fact that American audiences want variety in entertainment.

"Moving pictures audiences are being educated to a point where they are refusing to accept everything that Hollywood wants to give them," Binheim said. "They find in foreign motion pictures the variety and change in diet that is so necessary in the theatrical world."

On the other hand, Binheim pointed out that Hollywood has nothing to fear from foreign made pictures. Rather, he said, the showing of foreign films in this country is aiding in improving the standard of American films.

"No one wants to see foreign pictures every night any more than they want to eat caviar daily," Binheim explained. "The foreign pictures are just filling in a need and a change of program for American audiences."

Binheim, former manager of the Filmarte theatre in San Francisco, has contracted the leading European producers and is now furnishing foreign films to theatres throughout the Pacific coast.

Through arrangements made with Kuster and the Carmel Theatre, foreign pictures will be brought here on a regular schedule. The next picture will be "Marius" by the author of "Topaz." This will be followed by a remarkable French version of "The Three Musketeers."

The average garage mechanic has for years been classified with the Jesse James type of professional highwaymen. They're not to be trusted.

But even in mechanics, Carmel is different. There's one mechanic here who not only is trusted for his automotive knowledge, but who acts as parental advisor to many Carmel families.

He is Carl Harris. When his clients leave on an extended vacation trip, they don't turn the key of their house over to the police. Instead, they leave it with Carl. When there's illness in the family, it's Carl who comes and helps.

A short time ago, a member of a prominent, conservative family died. The funeral services were private, only close members of family invited. Carl and his wife were the only outsiders.

Some seven years ago, Carl came to Carmel and started operating a service station. Since then he has built in Carl's Auto Shop one of the most successful businesses in the village.

"I've never been or worked in a place where people have been so kind to me," Carl explains.

"Snap" Nelson, otherwise known in the literary world as Lee Sage, has a new western novel coming out this fall.

In between writing, however, Snap has taken over the Carmel Valley tavern and is remodeling it and putting in plenty of western color. It will be one of the outstanding spots on the peninsula.

In the words of the great story teller, "I tell it to you as 'twas told to me."

It seems that Earle Geek, famed in more ways than one on the Peninsula, owns an Austin Mighty Midget car and doesn't care who knows it. In fact Earle is a pretty independent lad all around. So, in Carmel the other day, he had to hustle into the post office on the way down to the Highlands and failing to find room at the curb he double parked right out in front.

Gus got him. Before long, Earle was on the carpet in front of Judge Wood. The charge was read. The description of the car was given.

"What?" cried the Judge. "An Austin? Why, Gus, I can't hear the case. It's out of my jurisdiction. Take it over to Salinas the first thing after lunch—to the Juvenile Court."

DeYoe Property Threatened by Valley Flames

The valuable property of Ray De Yoe, prominent local realtor was threatened for a time Sunday afternoon when fire broke out in "Los Ranchitos."

Believed to have originated through carelessness on the part of picnickers, the fire quickly gained headway under a strong wind, burning many acres of grazing land. Some 60 men, recruited from all parts of the peninsula, fought for more than an hour before it was placed under control.

According to DeYoe, only the quick manner in which the fire fighters worked, prevented the blaze from spreading to sections of his property where it could have done serious damage.

The fire was visible for many miles and many seeing it from a distance feared at first that it was the Tassajara mountain blaze which had been raging out of control for several weeks.

Except for the grazing land, DeYoe reported no damage to his land.
